

ESSAY 1 : Passion and talents

In the previous class, we talked about passions and talents and that have been in my mind since then. I am starting to wonder what exactly I want to do and what i am really good at. I also realize that talents sometimes have nothing to do with hobbies or interests. At least it's true for me because I love reading books, I am imaginary person but I cannot be a author because I am not good at writing it down.

Get back to the point, my passion is travel around the world, meet new people, experience the different cultures and lifestyles and the most exciting thing is get a chance to try out amazing and unique cuisines of every country. About my talents, I would say that I'm a friendly person, I love talking and listening to people, I feel happy and trusted when people tell me their stories.

The highlight of the class was the video of Steve Job Stanford Commencement Speech 2015 that the teacher showed us. I'm amazed with what we can learn in a video and from a person. Steve is just too unbelievably amazing and inspiring. He said "you can't connect the dots by looking forward, you can only connect the dots by looking backwards. You have to trust in something, your gut, destiny, life or karma". You will miss the fun if you're still worried about something bad may happen instead hoping for something good coming. Life is so short to look back, to be afraid of nothing. In the end, we only regret the chances that we don't take. I learnt that, if you wanna do something, do it now, don't wait till tomorrow. Another lesson from the CEO of Apple is "don't waste your time living somebody else's life".It's your life, you are living it, it's you not somebody else. Why do we have to do something that we hate just because people want us to ? ""You were born originally, don't die as a copy."

The last quote is the one I specially love "Do what you love and do it more often". You don't have to be good at something you love to do, sometimes all you need is only the passions. In fact, do something you happily to do is one of the ways to enjoy life. So what are you waiting for ? Enjoy life from now on, start with the smallest thing and head towards the bigger goal.
